A recent study suggests that more than six million people are abusing prescription drugs, making it a growing public health crisis.